This step may also be known as outline making as you need to write down all the important points in a rough draft. Whatever you find in the research and think it is worth keeping, then add it into the draft. By looking at this information, you'll be able to write an essay more easily and fast.

3. Prepare Proper Outline

Now this is the time to design a proper, final outline that contains not only the important points but also the headings, subheadings, facts, statistics and more. This is the final version that'll be followed in the writing process of your essay. Perfect essay writers literally follow this procedure to craft your essay which is why the final versions turn out to be mind-blowing.

4. Write a Catchy Introduction

An introduction is a hook, so it has to be really catchy. A perfect essay has a perfect introduction that keeps the readers engaged into the reading from the very beginning. An introduction is the make or break part of an essay, and our writers are so well aware of this fact.

5. Write the Whole Body and Conclusion

As you're proceeding with writing the next parts of the essay, you'll write the body paragraphs and conclusion. These parts need the same attention and brilliance as the introduction. Writing these parts must be done actively to make them flawless and excellent.

6. Reading and Proofreading

The process hasn't ended yet, you must know your essay still needs some work. Now as you've finished writing it, give it a read and see how it looks. If it needs improvement, go for it.
